

Planning Apprentice Positions, London and Reading offices

NEXUS
PLANNING

Nexus Planning are excited to be seeking two planning apprentices to join its busy planning teams in either Reading or London. The apprentice will work alongside the team on a variety of projects including strategic planning, retail studies and mixed-use developments.

The projects will relate to the university projects that will be undertaken as part of the programme set by London South Bank University.

Key tasks will include:

- Assisting the team with planning admin tasks
- Assisting the team with planning appraisals
- Assisting the team with the submission of planning applications
- Undertaking initial research for existing and new sites
- Review of planning history
- Review of planning policy where required
- Assisting the team with retail studies

Staff at London South Bank University will act as tutors to students on the Planning Practice Modules, being available by email and phone and face-to-face meetings as requested.

Students will also have a work-based mentor whose job it will be to support and guide the student as they identify, gather and analyse information. This is a key structural difference to the non-apprenticeship degree programmes and firmly sets the Degree Apprenticeships Chartered Town Planner apart from these.

In the Planning Practice Modules, the emphasis is on learning at and from the workplace. It is here where many of the skills and behaviours, that the Town Planner must develop, are best observed, analysed and developed. These modules will be supported via LSBU's Virtual Learning Environment, Moodle, and clear guidance will be given to the work-based mentor. The student will be required to log their work on the University's e-portfolio, One File.

The course is fully accredited by the Royal Town Planning Institute. This means that after graduation you can become a licentiate member of the RTPI. With two years relevant work experience (in some cases one year), you can apply to take the RTPI Assessment of Professional Competence exam and become a full member of the RTPI.
